THE BREVITY OF LIFE.

To the young it does not seem short; it seems very long. But as time passes on, the aspect of life changes. The man of forty thinks forty not nearly as he thought when he was fourteen; fifty appears to him but the prime of life; sixty far from aged. When, at length, increasing years admonish him that his life-work is ended, and that he can enter on no new undertakings, and he looks back to reflect on what he has accomplished, he wonders to see so little, and is amazed to find the road so short in traveling, which appeared so long in prospect. He then understands the as he never did before the meaning of Scripture. "Yes," he says to himself, "it is, indeed, true. Life is as a tale that is told, and as a dream when one awaketh.' the average length of human life is stated to be thirty-five years. This average, however, includes an estimate of all those who die in infancy. The statement of the average life of a healthy man may be enlarged somewhat. But it is perfectly safe to say that it is not over fifty years. Some live to three score years, or even three score years and teu, but more never reach the half century. Of this fifty years, the first twenty are taken in learning how to live. Thirty years may be fairly accepted as the average limit of the working life. But no man works the full twenty-four hours. Rest, recreation, food, sleep, Sabbath, and the enforced idleness which illness compels, reduce the period twothirds. Year in and year out, eight hours may be taken to represent the working day. The working life, then, is not thirty years; it is but ten. And of these ten years how much is necessarily absorbed by toil, by the gathering of grain that dies in the harvesting, and is never garnered into store houses? How much in getting clothing to be put on and worn out, in getting food to be consumed in use, in building houses to crumble and fall into decay, almost as soon as their owners? How much, too. of this time is lost in plans that come to naught, in sowing what never ripens, in fighting battles that are defeats? When we have taken from our life what time is necessary for preparation, what is required for rest and recreation, and

For whatsoever ease we can have or fancy here is shortly to be changed into sadness or tediousness; it goes away too soon, like the periods of our life, or stays too long, like the sorrow of a sinner; its own there is sorrow or an end of joy, there can be no true felicity; which because it must be had by some instrument, and in some period of our duration, we must prepared for us above, where eternity is the measure, felicity is the state, angels Remember that I take all kinds of Produce in exchange for goods, and now pay 14c per dozen for eggs.

WOLF TEETH IN HORSES.

The so-called wolf teeth are in themselves harmless enough, yet the popular would be well for horsemen to ignore. tion of the statement. The wolf teeth are, however the most harmless in the mouth, having long ago reached their full development, and are but slightly inserted in their sockets; while the great and dangerous irritation attends on the cutting of the large grinding teeth, and in the male, of the tushes. The presence of the wolf teeth in the mouth at this time is an accident, and not an injury. The temporary recovery often following their removal would have taken place all the same had they been left in the mouth, and a later attack | ed. is just as likely as if they were present. The excitement attendant on teething is natural; what we should guard against is its excess. Any costiveness of the bowels should be corrected by the feeding, or, if necessary, by 1 cz. Glauber salt daily. Teeth pressing painfully beneath tense, resistant, painful gums, indicate the need of the lancet; teeth entangled on the crowns of their successors should be removed : all excessive swelling, redness and tenderness of the gums demand lancing; and, finally, all should be avoided .- National Live-Stock Journal, Chicago. SELECTING DAIRY COWS.

Look first at the great characteristics of the dairy cow-a large stomach, indicated by broad hips, broad and deep loins and sides, a large digestive apparatus, which is the first essential requisite to the manufacture of milk. Secondly, a good constitution depending largely upon the lungs and heart, which should be well developed, and this is easily determined by examination; but the vigor and tone of the constitution are indicated by the luster of hair and brightness of the eye and horn, and the whole make-up. Thirdly, having deternined her capacity for digesting surplus food for making milk, look carefully to the receptacle for the milk-the udder -the veins leading to it. The cow may assimilate a large amount of food which goes largely to lay on flesh and fat; but if she has a long, broad and deep udder, with large milk veins, it is safe to conclude that her large capacity for digestion and assimilation are active in in filling this receptacle. In fact, the udder is the first point to look at in cursory examination of the cow, for nature is not apt to create in vain. If it reaches to the back line of the thighs, well up behind, reaches well forward, is broad and moderately deep, with teats well apart, and the skin soft and elastic, it may be inferred that nature has provided means for filling it.

If the udder be a small, round cylinder, hanging down in front of the thighs, like a six quart pail, the cow cannot be a profitable milker, whatever digestive apparatus she may have. A yellow skin and a yellow ear (inside) are almost universally regarded as present in a cow that gives rich, yellow milk; but after you find the indications mentioned above, you may admire as many others as you please-such as a first-class escutcheon, a long slim tail, beautifully turned, dishing face, a drooping waxy horn, a small straight, slim leg, or any other fancy points; but do not look for these until you have found the essentials .- National Live Stock Journal.

Every farmer should keep a book in which to paste agricultural scraps. Every one in reading a paper will see a number of things which he will wish to remember. He will perhaps see suggestions, the value of which he will desire to test, or hints which he will want to be governed by in future operations. And yet after reading the paper he will throw it down and will probably never see it again. In such a case all the valuable articles will be lost. To prevent such a loss every reader should clip not here, being people of but a day's from the papers such articles as he desires to preserve and remember, and paste them in a scrap book. Such a book at the end of a year or two will be

She Endures the Pain of a Severe Surgical Operation Without Taking Chloroform.

[From the Courier.] Mrs. Schoonmaker, of Creek Locks, Ulster Co., N. Y., had the misfortune to entirely lose the sight of one of her eyes, through an accident, and endured painful inflammatory action therein for two long years -the other eye finally becoming sympathetically affected, her general health seriously suffering; indeed, she was a mere wreck, a walking skeleton. In this terrible strait, she consulted Dr. David Kennedy of Rondout, New York, who told her at once that the injured eye must be removed. She quietly but firmly said; "All right, Doctor, but don't give me chloroform. Let my husband sit by my side during the operation, and I will neither cry out or stir." The work was done, and the poor woman kept her word. Talk of soldiery courage! This showed greater pluck than it takes to face a hundred guns. To restore her general health and give tone and strength to the system, Dr. Kennedy then gave the 'Favorite Remedy,' which cleansed the blood and imparted new life to the long suffering woman. She rapidly gained health and strength, and is now weil. The "Favorite Remedy" is a priceless blessing to woman. No family should suffering from all forms of Scrofula, if they be without it.
